

Charity Freely Given

“No gift is too small if it is in the service of the King.” An outpouring of generosity was exhibited yesterday as gifts and supplies were provided to the ailing village of Borealton. After a brief altercation with the Guards, everyone was free to pass and administer to those in need. Lady Melanie was overjoyed at the sight, and the villagers shyly but gratefully accepted the rations. The girls then sang a song for the people, led by the Messengers, further sharing the light and love of the King.

Weather

After a beautiful day yesterday of sunny skies and light fluffy clouds for the day's travels, Captivenians are recommended to brace themselves once again. A strong chance of thunderstorms and showers is predicted. Therefore, at dawn all eyes should “look to the West.” No, not to the East, but to the West.

Isaiah 58:10

And if you give yourself to the hungry and satisfy the desire of the afflicted, then your light will rise in darkness and your gloom will become like midday.

Vision Helps Find Box

Yet another box left by the late Lord Gabron has been found! Shown in a vision and with the help of Lord Valerian, the box was uncovered in a hidden garden that was once Lord Gabron's favourite place to pray. There is much excitement as it is one step closer to finding the elusive treasure. Self-proclaimed historian and cryptographer, Professor Poggle the Lesser, complains that using "visions" to find a lost object completely takes the challenge and character building out of a good old-fashioned treasure hunt. He further lamented on the state anthropological study has fallen to. As quoted: "It is a dark day for the likes of us in the natural sciences. What will happen next? Metal detectors?"

Letter to the Editor

Re: "The Markets Opened Yesterday", I believe there are much worse things to be in than a mediocre 80's rock band. I would hazard that a quintet of young gentlemen all proceeding in one direction or dare I say in sync would be much worse to be in.

Procession of the King

People from all over the realm of Captivenia and Lumenorus came together and gathered in adoration of the King. The night was cool, but the hearts of the maidens and Bellesera were warmed by the love of the King. The evening somberly concluded with the peaceful song of the Kings beloved subjects, and thus left a quiet resilience of love and serenity in the air of Captivenia, and its surrounding realms.
